RAISINS AND CURRANTS -All raisins, whether they be Muscatels, Valencias, or whatever variety, are in reality true grapes, differing from the wine grapes only in size, or the absence of the juicy principle which to a considerable extent develops into flesh or pulp. The best raisins are grown on the Spanish shores of the Mediterranean, the climate about Valencia and Malaga apparently suiting them better than anywhere else. But raising are also extensively cultivated in the lower parts of Greece, as well as in other parts of the concranging beet had said The Muscatel is the finest kind of raisins imported. The preparation of drying, upon which the value of the fruit to a great extent depends, is, in its case conducted differently from that of the more common kinds. Usually the grapes are gathered in bunches when fully ripe, and hang up or spread out to dry. These re afterwards placed in vessels full of holes, dip ed in a ley made of wood ashes and vantilla, with the addition of a little salt and oil. This brings sace harine juice to the surface and causes the dark brown color as well as the crystallization of sugar which is charcteristic of the cheaper fruit. The best varieties are simply dried in the sun before removal from the tree. The fruit is carefully water ed, and when at the proper stage of ripeness the st aks of the bunchcut through and an owed to hang till dry, the fruit by this means retaining its bloom, and being a light color when cry.

Among the many varieties of raisins known an commerce are Varencias, Denias and Laxias Granda. All these varieties of fruit are imported into this country in what are commercially called boxes and half boxes of half a hundred weight and quarter of a hundred weight

The small light colored raisins known as Sultanas we receive from Smyrna, and as everybody knows these are devoid of "stones" of more properly seeds. This seedless form has been brought about by a higher state of cultivation and usually fetches a higher price in the market. A common cheap fruit is also imported from Smyrna, quite the reverse of the little Sultana, being of a very dark color and having very large seed.

The little black fruits which in a culinary sense are of so much value, and which common usage and the corruption of a word has taught us to call Currants, are likewise a seedless variety of grape. The word current is derived from Corinth, which was originally the princi pal place of its cultivation. If the ancient Corinth no longer supplies us with the bulk or this most useful fruit, the whole of our imports are still trought from the numerous islands of the Archipelage and the neighboring shores of Asia Minorian danqua mom

VALUABLE AUTOGRAPH. - Horace Greeley in his Personal Reminiscences, now publishing in the New York Ledger, says:

A gushing youth once wrote me to this " Dear Sir-Among your literary treasures. you have doubtless preserved several autographs of our country's late lamented poet, dgar A. Poe. If so, and you can spare one, lease enclose it to me, and receive the thanks

Cours truly, a transport of the state of the Dear Sir-Among my literary treasures, there happens to be exactly one autograph of our country's late lamented poet, Edgar A. Poe. It is his note of hand for $50, with my endorsement across the back. It cost me exactly $50.75 (including protest), and you may have it for half that amount. Yours,

"That autograph, I regret to say, remains on my hands, and is still for sale at the original price, despite the lapse of time and the depreciation of our currency."

Miscellaucous Items.

M. Indennerech, the executioner of Paris, has improved the guillotine and its management to such an extent that he can cut off a man's head in six seconds from the time he reaches the scaffold, if the victim is only accommodating. He is rich, but follows his profession from philanthropic motives.

Races and languages are intermixed in the most puzzling way in California. In reply to the question, "Can you speak English?" an Italian bootmaker in San Francisco replied with pride, "Si, senor; certainment; you bet!"

An Illinois black man ordered his wife to put crape on the door, preparatory to beating her brains out with a chair; but she furnished the corpse by cutting the thread of his sable existence with her scissors.
